ABOUT THE CTF

The Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) is a federally incorporated, non-profit, non-partisan, education and advocacy organization founded in Saskatchewan in 1990. It has grown to become Canada's foremost taxpayer advocacy organization with more than 61,000 supporters nation-wide.

The CTF's three-fold mission statement is:

- To act as a watchdog on government spending and to inform taxpayers of governments' impact on their economic well-being;
- To promote responsible fiscal and democratic reforms and to advocate the common interests of taxpayers; and
- To mobilize taxpayers to exercise their democratic rights and responsibilities.

The CTF maintains a federal and Ontario office in Ottawa and offices in the four provincial capitals of B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. In addition, the CTF recently opened its Centre for Aboriginal Policy Change in Victoria. Provincial offices conduct research and advocacy activities specific to their provinces in addition to acting as regional organizers of Canada-wide initiatives.

The CTF's official publication, The Taxpayer magazine, is published six times a year. CTF offices also send out weekly Let's Talk Taxes commentaries to over 800 media outlets as well as providing media comment on current events. CTF staff and Board members are prohibited from holding memberships in any political party. The CTF is funded by after-tax, free will, non-receiptable contributions.

The CTF does not receive government funding. The CTF's award winning web site can be found at: www.taxpayer.com

INTRODUCTION

This document provides a quantitative analysis of 12 years of funding activities by Canada Economic Development for the Regions of Quebec (CED-Q) from fiscal years 1989/1990 to 2000/2001.

Using information obtained through Access to Information, the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) analyzed 8,965 separate funding disbursements to thousands of different government departments or agencies (federal, provincial and municipal), businesses, associations, labour organizations and individuals.

PURPOSE OF CED-Q

According to the CED-Q web site, its mandate is:

“To promote economic development in areas of Quebec:

- where low incomes and slow economic growth are prevalent or where opportunities for productive employment are inadequate;
- to emphasize long-term economic development and the creation of sustainable employment and income; and
- to focus on small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) and the development and enhancement of entrepreneurship.”

CED-Q maintains 15 offices throughout Quebec and more than 30 Community Futures Development Corporations. The agency is designed and mandated to be the face of the federal government in Quebec. It was also responsible for maintaining the Canada Infrastructure Works Program in the province of Quebec.

CED-Q IN THE LARGER CONTEXT

CED-Q is one of four regional development agencies that are under the broad ministerial umbrella of Industry Canada.

The regional cousins of CED-Q include the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency (ACOA), Western Economic Diversification (WED), and the Federal Economic Development Initiative in Northern Ontario (FEDNOR). Closely related to CED-Q is the Business Development Bank of Canada (BDC), a crown corporation that operates nationally; Technology Partnerships Canada (TPC), a special operating agency of Industry Canada; and the Aboriginal Business Canada Program, aimed at aboriginal Canadians.

Taken together, these programs represent the bulk of the federal government's business subsidy activity. Of Industry Canada's $4 billion in annual spending – the lion's share is spent by these seven aforementioned programs. Over the last 14 years (1987-2000) spending on these programs totaled $48 billion – a substantial cost to taxpayers.

Sadly, economic subsidies are not new to Canada. During the 19th century, arguments were made in favour of these schemes and formed the backbone of Canadian industrial policy. However, the Canadian government continues to cling blindly to such schemes in spite of solid academic and historical evidence that they produce detrimental economic distortions and hinder Canada's ability to compete in the global marketplace of the 21st century.

This report provides an overview of $1.78 billion in CED-Q funding over the past 12 years.

PREVIOUS CTF REPORTS

Over the last five years the CTF has release the following reports:

- Corporate Welfare: A Report on Sixteen Years of Industry Canada Financial Assistance, April 1998. The report looked at over $4 billion in contributions, finding that only 15.2% had been repaid;
- Corporate Welfare Volume Two: A Nightmare on Queen Street, June 1998. The report looked at $11 billion in contributions, finding that a 1996 Consulting and Audit Canada report documented serious problems with repayment provisions, monitoring and collection;
- ACOA: The Lost Decade – A 10-year Quantitative Analysis, May 2000. The report looked at $2.5 billion in contributions, finding that 72% of the funds were in the form of non-repayable grants;
- WED: Wasted Effort and Dollars? – A 13-Year Quantitative Analysis of Western Economic Diversification, November 2000. The report looked at $2 billion of contributions, finding that 62% of the funds were in the form of non-repayable grants, and that of the $132 million of conditionally repayable contributions, only $4.5 million of repayments had been received; and
- Peeling Back the Onion: A Taxpayers Audit of Technology Partnerships Canada, February 2002. The report looked at $1.7 billion of grants and contributions, asking 11 audit questions of both the Industry Minister and the Auditor General.

When the previous five reports are taken together, the CTF has analyzed $20 billion in Industry Canada contributions representing 41% of the $48 billion figure cited above. In each instance, similar problems have been found: handouts to major transnational corporations, grants to chambers of commerce and unions, millions of dollars to golf courses and hotels, appalling amounts of loan write-offs, and an unapologetic federal government.

CED-Q: A 12-YEAR QUANTITATIVE SNAPSHOT

Using information obtained from CED-Q through Access to Information, the CTF has determined that since April 1, 1989, CED-Q has distributed almost $1.78 billion in 8,964 separate disbursements to identifiable businesses, numbered companies, associations, festivals, hotels, golf courses, other governments, quasi-public institutions and individuals.

Three distinct types of contributions exist:

- non-repayable contributions (French: Contributions);
- subsidies (French: Subventions); and
- repayable contributions (French: Contributions Remboursables).

Only repayable contributions come with the potential of the Crown recouping all – or more often than not – some of the original contribution amount.

Breakdown of Disbursements: FY 1989/90 to FY 2000/01

- Almost 79% or $1.39 billion of the funds disbursed by CED-Q were in the form of non-repayable contributions with another 2% of $34 million disbursed in the form of subsidies, therefore 81% or $1.4 billion was disbursed in what is more commonly referred to as “grants”.
- Less than 19% or just under $352 million of the funds disbursed were in the form of repayable contributions (ie: monies with the potential to be repaid).

MARCH MADNESS SPENDING ... AGAIN

- In past regional development and industrial assistance program reports produced by the CTF, inordinate numbers of project approvals during the month of March – the last month in the government's fiscal year – have been discovered.
- Most recently, the CTF found an average of 56% of all project approvals in the Technology Partnerships Canada (TPC) program over its first six years of operation occurred in the month of March.

Breakdown of March Disbursements vs. Total Disbursements: FY 1989/90 to FY 2000/01

Totals	965	$ 281,658,002	8,965	$ 1,778,943,992	10.8%	15.8%

- If CED-Q disbursed funds evenly throughout the fiscal year, one would expect to see an 8.25% average dollar disbursement value for the month of March. In fairness, budget timing and project approval processes can sometimes skew this value. Nevertheless, a massive amount of March Madness spending occurred in fiscal years 1990-1991, 1994-1995, and as recently as 1999-2000.
- The ATIP records show in each of these three fiscal years, larger numbers of projects and/or higher project values were approved in March, many in the last week of March. Treasury Board has enacted guidelines to guard against government departments and agencies rapidly spending their full budget allocations in the dying days of the fiscal year, more commonly referred to as spend-it-or-lose-it spending. It appears that CED-Q violated these guidelines.

- The largest disbursement of funds was 3,316 separate allocations into three successive versions of the Canada-Quebec Infrastructure Works program totaling over $669 million, an average of $202,000 per allocation.
- The second largest allocations were to Quebec-based small business that collectively received over $311 million in non-repayable contributions (53%) and repayable contributions (47%) through CED-Q's Small Business IDEA program.
- Regional strategic initiatives combined (non-repayable and repayable contributions) were the third largest CED-Q disbursement envelope totaling in excess of $194 million.

GOVERNMENT AS BANKER

Looking at the global disbursement breakdown chart on page four, CED-Q has entered into 1,648 separate loan arrangements worth over $351 million from fiscal year 1989/1990 to fiscal year 2000/2001.

As with other regional development agencies like ACOA, WED and Industry Canada (Corporate), CED-Q's record at collecting taxpayer dollars put at risk is dubious at best. The following chart – derived from the Public Accounts – clearly illustrates this point.

- Since 1989/1990, CED-Q has collected $118 million in loan repayments and associated revenues. This represents 33% its total loan portfolio value during the past 12 years.
- With 33% of its loans collected and another 33% written off, the key policy question is obvious: What amount of the remaining third will be collected and what amount will be written off?

THE 'JOBS CREATED' ARGUMENT

- According to CED-Q, some 98,657 jobs were created while another 55,835 jobs were maintained as a result of its funding activities during the past twelve years. These claims – like those of every other federal subsidy agency – are highly suspect.
- These figures are difficult to reconcile. They are taken directly from funding applications of recipient companies and to date, not one regional development or industrial assistance agency has been able to provide the CTF with its methodology or process for monitoring and/or annually updating its statistics on jobs created and/or jobs maintained.

POLITICS AND PHOTO-OPS

In almost every CED-Q contract there is an explicit publicity clause. Most agreements include an ANNEX, usually titled Public Announcements and Communications.

Portions of this ANNEX, usually in French (with English translation in italics) are found below.

Annonces et ceremonies

Announcements and Ceremonies

Le client consent par les présentes, à ce qu'une annonce publique soit faite par le ministre, sous forme de communiqué contenant les données décrites à l'annexe "C" de la présente entente.

The client hereby consents to a public announcement by or on behalf of the Minister in the form of communications described in Annex C.

In English, this ANNEX goes on to read as follows:

- The client shall advise the minister in writing, at least 14 days in advance of any special ceremonies to be held in conjunction with the project.
- The client hereby consents to the participation by the minister or his representative at any such official ceremony and to have the ceremonies take place on a day mutually agreed to by the Client and the Minister.
- The Client shall, in all his publications, news releases and presentations regarding the Project .. acknowledge that the project was assisted by CED-Q ...
- The Client will provide the Minister with milestone information which will be used by CED-Q to promote the project

This clause was found in five randomly ATIPed CED-Q contracts – though the existence of a specific ANNEX devoted to publicity leads us to assume that this is standard practice.

The aim is clear: provide the Minister or another MP with the opportunity to be seen cutting a ribbon in the community.

OTHER NOTABLE FINDINGS

- The top ten recipients of disbursements in each fiscal year are found in APPENDIX A. They range from a low of 19% of all funds disbursed to a high of 53% of all funds disbursed in a given fiscal year.
- $817 million was doled out to small, medium and large Quebec businesses either in the form of contributions, subsidies or repayable contributions. A sampling of these recipients is found in APPENDIX B and includes some of the who's who of corporate Canada including SR Telecom, Johnson and Johnson, Intranets, The Royal Bank, Banque National due Canada, Ingersol-Rand Canada, and Siemens.
- Recipients of other corporate welfare programs – such as TPC – also received CED-Q disbursements. Companies included Harris Canada, Baultar Composites, Naoki Systems, Spacebridge, and Zenon Environmental. Samples of these disbursements are found in APPENDIX C.
- Disbursements to biotech and pharmaceutical companies as listed in APPENDIX D totaled over $6 million. The bulk of these expenditures occurred in the last four years and is likely a precursor to future CED-Q funding increases in this sector.
- The fashion industry received disbursements in excess of $10 million as listed in APPENDIX E.
- Quasi-autonomous, non-government agencies and community economic development corporations received in excess of $149 million in disbursements as listed in APPENDIX F. These organizations are not subject to the Access to Information Act laws and essentially function as min-corporate subsidy agencies with minimal transparency.
- Associations, unions, chambers of commerce and other organizations received over $154 million in funds as catalogued in APPENDIX G. The overwhelming majority of these were non-repayable contributions, i.e. – grants .
- Canadian tax dollars continue to ensure that people can play. APPENDIX H (Your Tax Dollars Hard at Play) uncovers over $119 million disbursed to tourism initiatives, golf courses, bicycle manufactures, festival and hotels.

THE CTF'S OPPOSITION TO CORPORATE WELFARE

Since its inception in 1990, the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) has vociferously and consistently argued against direct government financial assistance to all types of businesses, large and small. In this sense, it has continued the legacy championed by former federal NDP leader, David Lewis, who railed against 'corporate welfare' in the early 1970s.

Opposition parties have timidly and haphazardly held the federal Liberal government to account for its squandering of billions of hard-earned tax dollars. There is a disturbing pattern of obfuscation and inconsistency perpetuated by federal officials responsible for administering programs and agencies under the auspices of Industry Canada.

The federal government is not alone in its love of corporate welfare. Provincial administrations of all political stripes also embrace government assistance to business in varying degrees. And even those administrations that claim to have eliminated direct subsidies have more often than not simply replaced them with industry or even company-specific tax credit programs on the back end.

Finally, municipal governments also play the corporate welfare game through a variety of tax abatement schemes and/or direct incubator centre funding from the property tax base, just to name a few of the creative financing measures local law-makers and officials use to subsidize business.

Over the last five years, the CTF has released five reports on corporate welfare. Each of these reports has yielded some common findings:

- An alarmingly low level of loan, contribution, and 'conditionally repayable' contribution repayments;
- Dubious economic benefits and alleged numbers of jobs created and/or maintained;
- The majority of financial assistance has been consistently provided to some of Canada's largest and most profitable companies as ranked by Report on Business (ROB 1000) and the Financial Post (FP 500); and
- Increasing percentages of loan write-offs representing over $781 million when Industry Canada, WED, ACOA and CED-Q are added together.

In response to these reports, the federal government employs a consistent but tiring message track. Without exception, the Minister responsible will defend the program as an integral part of the government's industrial policy; question the validity of the CTF's data and wax eloquently about so-called job creation benefits. These answers from elected officials can only be described as 'economical with the truth.'

ACADEMIC STUDIES PROVE THE POINT

The CTF has consistently maintained that lowering personal and business taxation levels while fostering an internationally competitive regulatory framework -- facilitated by adopting an aggressive anti-subsidy stance at the WTO and other multilateral organizations -- are two of the key elements needed to promote economic growth and raise the real incomes of citizens. This two-track approach should be adopted instead of direct government intervention in the marketplace.

The fundamental problem with corporate welfare is that it consistently fails to deliver the promised goods. Despite the widespread adoption of corporate welfare programs by governments around the world, there is no solid evidence that such programs actually promote economic development (Moore & Stansel, 1995; McMahon, 1996; Mihlar & Satinder, 1998; Buss, 1999a; Moore, 1999).

This should not come as much of a surprise. In his 1995 Report, the Auditor General of Canada examined the issue of regional economic development programs. While the government spent nearly $4.5 billion on these programs between 1988 and 1995, the Auditor found no “appropriate accountability information about the results achieved.”

Similar findings were re-iterated by the current Auditor General in her December 2001 report. In some areas faulty or limited evaluations were performed while in other areas no evaluations were performed at all. Even proponents recognize that the lack of supporting evidence imperils the future of these programs (Bachelor, 1997; Bartik, 1994; Dewar, 1998; Grant II & Wallace, 1995). As such, there is a growing body of scholarly research on how to evaluate the benefits of “economic development” programs.

These efforts nonetheless have failed to counter the growing body of evidence that direct government incentives to retain, attract or expand business do not significantly influence the location or growth of economic activity.

As noted in previous CTF studies, Professor Terry Buss of Suffolk University reviewed over 100 targeted industry studies and concluded that corporate welfare programs in the United States are based on poor data, unsound evaluative methods, and faulty economic reasoning (Buss, 1999a).

While these “targeting” studies are routinely used to justify the annual expenditure of tens of billions of taxpayer dollars, their efficacy has never been scientifically validated.

Did government intervention contribute to growth and development? Or were other factors responsible for change? What were the positive and negative effects, unintended consequences, and long-term impacts? Did the costs exceed benefits? What public investments were foregone in favour of the interventions? Buss could find no studies that answered these important questions – nor could his critics (Buss, 1999b).

On the other hand, Buss found that targeted industry studies use poor or inappropriate data, deeply flawed social science methods, and simplistic mathematical models to produce often-dubious targets. Even when proponents point to apparent successes, the underlying economic premises in the evaluations are so deeply and seriously flawed that the benefits are illusory. And for every illusory success, there are mountains of costly failures.

So, why do so many governments throw tax dollars at private business? While there are no certain economic benefits, there are clear political benefits (Dewar, 1998; Buss, 1999a). Corporate welfare programs allow public officials to take credit for addressing important public concerns and protect themselves from blame for not acting to prevent relocation of firms to other communities.

Professor Kenneth Thomas of the University of Missouri at St. Louis – who is recognized as North America’s leading academic on corporate welfare – reaches a similar conclusion in his landmark study of Western hemispheric subsidy schemes entitled Competing for Capital (2000).

Elected officials need economic development programs to deliver quick, visible projects in their efforts to solve their jurisdiction’s economic problems, manage business climate problems, and achieve other aims. Ribbon-cutting photo opportunities, sod-turning events, and upbeat press releases are clearly worth the millions in debt, taxes, and lost opportunities, at least for the elected officials.

Regrettably, such folly is never worth it for taxpayers and represents a tremendous opportunity cost where public dollars could have been left in taxpayers’ pockets, directed toward debt repayment or arguably, targeted for true public good spending in the realm of infrastructure, health care or education.

THE CASE AGAINST CORPORATE WELFARE

As presented in previous reports, the CTF’s main arguments against corporate welfare are listed below:

1) Market decisions should be made by the market, NOT by politicians and bureaucrats.

The function of the private capital market is to direct investment to projects, industries or firms that offer the best and most secure rate of return. Different pools of capital from institutional and non-institutional sources are available depending on the technology involved and levels of risk inherent in each project. To attempt to replace or mimic this judgment through government intervention is fundamentally flawed and unnecessary. The difference between a good investment and a bad investment for a private investor can be the difference between a life of luxury and permanent unemployment; no comparable discipline exists for government bureaucrats or politicians.

2) Corporate Welfare is NOT driven by market imperatives.

Investors who weigh reward against risk propel market driven investments. Politically driven investments are motivated by political imperatives and the number one factor in these decisions is usually a preoccupation with “how many jobs are created” (an inexact science in its own right) regardless of profitability or sustainability.

3) Selecting winners and losers is NOT a task to which government officials are well suited.

The best investment decisions are made in an environment characterized by a “glut” of experience and in a “vacuum” of politics. Corporate welfare decisions are often made by individuals with no experience in private investing and set in a politically charged environment. Ensuring that taxpayer financed projects meet geographic, industrial equity and politically saleable criteria can become an end in itself. Governments have an abysmal record of picking winners, but losers have a stellar record of picking governments.

4) Corporate welfare is inherently unfair.

Business subsidies create an uneven playing field. Credit and capital can be diverted from successful firms to less successful, politically connected firms. Worse, firms that do not receive government assistance subsidize their government-supported competitors through their corporate tax payments.

5) Corporate welfare undermines confidence in our democratic institutions.

While portrayed as benign industrial policy, there is a growing perception that government assistance to industry is little more than reciprocal payola for financial support at election time. A series of funding analyses conducted by the CTF and others revealing the activities of Industry Canada, ACOA, WED, EDC, CED-Q, HRDC and other federal schemes have only served to reinforce this perception.

6) Corporate welfare runs contrary to free enterprise.

Business owners and entrepreneurs can become so enamoured and adept at securing government financing that they lose sight of their core competencies, those being the creation of wealth and maximization of product/service value. In essence, they can become better lobbyists than businesspeople. It turns our entrepreneurs into “grantpreneurs.”

7) Corporate welfare creates a culture of dependency.

Business owners become so reliant on government assistance that they actually build expectations of government assistance into financial plans for various ventures which has the perverse effect of slowing the growth of other non-institutional sources of financing including venture capital funds and a critical mass of angel investors.

8) Corporate welfare leads to higher taxes.

Someone must pay the bill for years of corporate welfare; inevitably it is both individual and business taxpayers.

9) Corporate welfare is not a public good.

Tax dollars are to be directed to purposes and endeavours that offer the largest societal benefit or those areas where society has determined that equity considerations must prevail: public goods or social programs.

A few examples include: infrastructure such as roads and sewers; services such as national defence, policing, customs, border control and immigration; and social service programs such as universal health care or assistance for the disabled. Business subsidies do not fit these criteria.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The academic arguments against corporate welfare are compelling, but the actions of CED-Q paint an equally disturbing picture.

CED-Q's activities are primarily motivated by politics. The inclusion of a special ANNEX and clause devoted to publicizing government's role illustrates the political imperatives that drive the agency.

Economic considerations are secondary and claims concerning job creation successes are fanciful at best. The other question to ask is how many jobs have been destroyed as CED-Q plays venture capitalist with taxpayer dollars in la belle province.

As many loans have been written off as have been repaid and over 81% of all funds disbursed were non-repayable.

The CTF Recommends:

- All efforts be made to recoup the remaining $115 million in outstanding repayable contributions; and
- CED-Q be phased out over a three-year period (concurrent with the abolition of TPC, ACOA, WED and FEDNOR) and replaced with broad based business tax reductions.
