Details:

If an MP collects their pension immediately their severance is decreased by the value of their annual pension. In many cases that will mean they won't receive any severance, in others that it will be substantially reduced.

The annual pension estimates are based on the average of the best five years of the MP's salary multiplied by the MP's total pension accrual. The pension accrual is 3% per year served as an MP but additional amounts for other roles such as minister, party leader or committee chair are included.

The lifetime estimates are based on pension payments up to age 90. It also includes the annual indexation for which, a conservative estimate of a 2% per year was used.

These calculations are estimates and shouldn't be considered exact. The calculations are based on the information provided in the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act and from the MP's official biographies.
